

SECURITY EDUCATION NEWSLETTER

OPM Breach: Espionage Protection

As Boeing employees and US security-clearance holders, you are potential targets of anyone seeking elicit access to information and technology.

Employees need to be aware of adversarial attempts to solicit information that could be used against the United States government or Boeing.

Be wary of unsolicited attempts by unknown individuals or groups to make contact by e-mail, telephone, social media, and personal encounters.

Review the information in your SF-86. Know the details. If you are a victim of the OPM breach, an adversary can't use your information against you if you know all the specifics.

Report suspicious contacts experienced by your relatives and associates, particularly those individuals identified in OPM personnel records. Consider warning those listed on your SF-86 of this possibility.

The good news is you already know the best ways to protect yourself: avoid discussing work outside of the office, be wary of prying questions, and report suspicious contacts.

Do not hesitate to call your local Security professionals if you have any questions.