JAMES R. EDGAR
Regional Director – Cargo Marketing
Boeing Commercial Airplanes

James “Jim” Edgar has been regional director – cargo marketing for nine of the 21 years that he has been associated with the air transportation industry. As regional director, Edgar leads Boeing air-cargo monitoring efforts in Asia and is a key member of the team that produces The Boeing Company’s World Air Cargo Forecast. The forecast is published in even-numbered years and is considered a leading information resource for the industry. Mr. Edgar’s expertise on air cargo trends also plays a key role in Boeing product strategy and product-development efforts.

Previously, Mr. Edgar worked in the Defense and Space Group, where he was involved in program planning, contracts and finance for the Inertial Upper Stage program. He spent seven years in the airline industry, three with a commuter carrier and four with American Airlines.

Mr. Edgar also managed military passenger and cargo terminals in the United States and the Middle East during five years with the U.S. Air Force, where he attained the rank of Captain. He served on the staffs of two presidents while assigned to Air Force One. During his five years of military service, Jim also managed passenger and cargo terminals in the U.S. and Middle East.

Born in San Francisco, Jim grew up in Southern California. He holds an undergraduate degree from Rutgers College and has an M.B.A. in International Business from the University of Washington. He is married and has a son and daughter. He serves on the boards of several educational and charitable institutions.
